Ontario Sets Fallout Test

TORONTO (UPI) — The Ontario government yesterday announced its intention to establish a laboratory to test the fallout of deadly strontium-90 — a by-product of atom and hydrogen bomb blasts — following a report that the radioactive element is falling faster than expected and that the world's greatest concentration is in the northern United States and southern Canada.

'It's a Miracle If They Get Him Out'

BUXTON, England (AP) — Neil Moss, 20-year-old Oxford University student and amateur cave explorer, still was breathing Monday night after being trapped by the shoulders 30 hours in a tapering crevice 1,000 feet below ground. He was standing there upright—but unconscious.

A 100-man rescue team of doctors, miners and air force alpinists four times strained to pull him clear by a rope passed under his shoulders. But Moss, six feet, two inches tall and weighing 170 pounds, was wedged so tightly that the ropes snapped three times.

An RAF doctor, Flt. Lt. John Carter, reported the man was breathing strongly but put his chance of release at only "fair."

Moss went into the cavern Sunday with a team of potholers—cave exploring enthusiasts. Moss went off to explore by himself. Soon his fellow potholers heard him calling "help me, I'm stuck."

Ron Peters, a 30-year-old printer who weighs only 98 pounds, four times went down to put the rope on the trapped man.

"It was aboslute hell down there," he said. "It'll be a miracle if they get him out."

Super Bomarc Gets U.S. Green Light

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new $300,000,000 contract was announced Saturday for the super Bomarc missile. It apparently means the air force is ordering the target-seeking weapon into full-scale production before it has been test-flown. It has a radius of 400 miles. Senator Henry Jackson of Washington said the air force is giving Boeing Airplane Company the contract to complete development and manufacture of its advanced model B Bomarc.

Boeing already has built an undisclosed number of the advanced model Bomarcs at its Seattle plant.

The new model is designed as a defence against other air-breathing missiles as well as planes.
